

Frequently Asked Questions

1. What is the Highland School of Technology?

Highland School of Technology opened in July of 2000 as the district's first total choice magnet program, and it draws its student body from the other nine high schools in the county. It is a full-day comprehensive high school program with emphasis on three Career and Technical Academies: Business, Legal & Information Sciences, Health Sciences, and Manufacturing/Engineering and Graphics.

2. How is Highland School of Technology Different From Other Choice High Schools?

Highland School of Technology is a full-school magnet school, instead of offering a select program within the school. Students are fully immersed in the comprehensive academic, extra-curricular, and total school education offered at Highland. All students are required to complete a career pathway in their chosen area that culminates in work-based learning opportunities in their senior year.

3. What are the benefits of attending Highland School of Technology?

The emphasis at Highland School of Technology is on integrating learning within the community. The faculty is active in planning integration of the curriculum so that students see relationships and therefore a purpose for learning and understanding the curriculum's application in a real-world setting. Unique to Highland, the education is built around the idea of not only the best academic education per class, but ensuring students see the connection between subjects and skills. Students graduate from Highland fully prepared for their post-graduation plans. They lead the way through AP and college credit courses. Student's academic performance places them, and the school, at the top of all high schools in North Carolina.

4. Who Can Apply to Highland School of Technology?

Current 8th grade students residing in Gaston County that meet the entrance criteria are eligible to apply for admission.
